Terminology

“Even more than other areas of health and medicine, the mental health field is plagued by disparities in the availability of and access to its services. These disparities are viewed readily through the lenses of racial and cultural diversity, age, and gender.”

Diversity

Includes all the ways in which people differ, encompassing the different characteristics that make one individual or group different from another.

While diversity is often used in reference to race, ethnicity, and gender, a broader definition of diversity includes age, national origin, religion, disability, sexual orientation, socioeconomic status, education, marital status, language, and physical appearance.

This definition also includes diversity of thought: ideas, perspectives, and values, and recognizes the importance of intersectionality.

Equity

Fair treatment, access, opportunity, and advancement for all people, while at the same time striving to identify and eliminate barriers that have prevented the full participation of some groups.

Improving equity involves increased justice and fairness within the procedures and processes of institutions or systems, as well as in their distribution of resources.

Tackling equity issues requires an understanding of the root causes of outcome disparities within society.

Inclusion

The act of creating environments in which any individual or group can be and feel welcomed, respected, supported, and valued to fully participate.

An inclusive and welcoming climate embraces differences and offers respect in words and actions for all people.

While an inclusive group is by definition diverse, a diverse group isn't always inclusive. Increasing recognition of implicit bias helps organizations be deliberate about addressing issues of inclusivity.

Implicit Bias

The attitudes of stereotypes that affect our understanding, actions, and decisions in an unconscious manner

Activated involuntarily, without awareness or intentional control

Can be either positive or negative

Implicit bias is neurobiologically based and adaptive, and therefore, we all have them

Staats, C., Capatosto, K., Wright, R. A., & Contractor, D. (2014). State of the science: Implicit bias review 2014. Kirwan Institute for the Study of Race and Ethnicity. <http://kirwaninstitute.osu.edu/wp-content/uploads/2014/03/2014-implicit-bias.pdf>.

Microaggressions

“Brief, everyday exchanges that send denigrating messages to certain individuals because of their group membership.”

Microaggressions are experienced by most stigmatized individuals and occur on a regular basis

Microaggressions experienced by underrepresented groups during medical education have higher rates of burnout depression than majority students.

These experiences often influence long-term recruitment and retention of talented underrepresented faculty in academic centers

Cultural Competence

The ability to interact effectively with people of different cultures, ensuring the needs of all community members are addressed

<https://www.samhsa.gov/capt/applying-strategic-prevention/cultural-competence>

Practicing Cultural Humility

Commit

To a lifelong process of self-evaluation and self-critique

Desire

To fix power imbalances between providers and clients

Develop

Community partnerships to advocate within the larger organizations in which we participate

Tervalon, M., & Murray-Garcia, J. (1998). Cultural humility versus cultural competence: A critical distinction in defining physician training outcomes in multicultural education. Journal of Health Care for the Poor and Underserved, 9, 117-125.

Structural Competency

“The trained ability to discern how a host of issues defined clinically as symptoms, attitudes, or diseases (e.g., depression, hypertension, obesity, smoking, medication “non-compliance,” trauma, psychosis) also represent the downstream implications of a number of upstream decisions about such matters as health care and food delivery systems, zoning laws, urban and rural infrastructures, medicalization, or even about the very definitions of illness and health.”
